

The Barracough Brothers

For 2019, Nick Barracough (12 Years Old) got the idea in his head to film himself and his "Brothers" Kaos and Edward. The result? Total Comedy!

Starting way back in about 2015, Nick was filming a magic trick, with cards, and that became the original episode, grainy and black and white, but has now been restored for you in most color. Kaos provided most of the comedy in that episode, because he was chewing on his Kong Toy.

The trio filmed 15 (or so) episodes within 2019, thinking some would be the end. The first episode was pretty good. They tried to do a magic trick, but that failed. So they played Help! By The Beatles, but it was not good audio. They tried again in the second episode, but that was no better, but the magic trick was great!

After filming more episodes, the most notable chapter was when they brought in Stagg Chile. Stagg, although being a madman, provided great comedy to the show, until he left. "Stagg was a good man, and we owe so much to him," stated Kaos in reminiscence.

As the year progressed into June and May, the show was showing signs of dying out, but the fans were still enjoying themselves. The official studio was closed down, but it reopened with new chairs, which would be used in the final episodes.

March 2020 rolled around, and the Barracough Brothers came together for one last swing. After filming about 5 episodes, they ended abruptly, shortly after announcing big plans and interviewing Ocean Spray.

Enjoy these ~~precious~~ minutes of comedy, hopefully you will enjoy them as much as we have. Peace and Love,

Anna Sytsenko and Joe Barracough
